00:00:00 JULIAN BOND : What happened is after the civil war ended and the slaves were emancipated, these people were left with no money, no education, no property, no sense of being real citizens because they weren't allowed to register and vote, um, left sort of in limbo. And for most of them, they reverted to the protection of their former masters. They took up the same jobs with him that they had had when he owned them. And the difference is, he now owned them economically. He didn't own them physically, but he owned
