India's Reforms: How They Produced Inclusive Growth

Jagdish Bhagwati and Arvind Panagariya

ABSTRACT

While there is now consensus that liberalizing reforms have been behind the acceleration of growth in India to the current 8 to 9 percent level, critics continue to argue that opening the economy to trade has hurt the poor, that rapid growth is leaving the socially disadvantaged groups behind, and that the reforms have led to increased inequality. They also argue that people themselves do not feel that their fortunes are improving. Five original essays in this volume, topped by a substantial introductory essay summarizing their findings, meet these challenges to the reforms head-on. They use l ... More

Satisfactions and Dissatisfactions with Democracy, Politics, and the Economy

Alfred Stepan

DOI:10.1093/acprof:oso/9780199915187.003.0002

[-] Abstract and Keywords C

Eminent political scientist Alfred Stepan analyzes the subjective responses of individuals when asked how their conditions have changed and how they see the future without necessarily connecting them to the policies. His findings unequivocally show that a rising proportion of the people say their fortunes are improving while a declining proportion say their fortunes are declining. This is true for the entire country and for all the states and union territories. The findings also show that a rising proportion of the people say their expectations for the future economic prospects are improving while a declining proportion say their expectations are declining.
